How Social Security Will Change in 2019

Social Security, one of America's most popular public programs, will deliver a welcome change in 2019 to the 60 million older adults collecting retirement benefits. The average monthly payment will rise by 2.8 percent, which is the biggest cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) since 2012. It's not a huge amount—an average hike of $39 a month, with the average check rising to $1,461, vs. $1,422 in 2018. But even a few dollars more can make a big difference for many older Americans.
